Sittercity is America's largest website for connecting families with quality, local in-home caregivers, with nearly 2 million caregivers nationwide.

Represented employees' eligibility for this program varies by bargaining unit. Represented employees may contact their Human Resources office or union with questions about eligibility.

Sittercity provides UC employees with access to local, pre-screened caregivers and the tools (including reviews, references and background checks) to review and select the caregiver of their choice. While Sittercity employs many pre-screening and on-going monitoring processes, and will provide support to UC employees if there are concerns, UC employees are responsible for their use of Sittercity, including selecting, hiring, paying and managing the caregivers of their choice. The use of the Sittercity Corporate Program should be carefully considered, taking into account individual situations and preferences. The University of California does not endorse or recommend any individual caregiver.
